Age and Ageing

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Applications are invited for a two-year fellowship attached to Age and Ageing, journal of the BGS and the highest impact clinical geriatric medical journal worldwide.

The Editorial Board developed this fellowship to enable trainees in geriatric medicine, or other clinical professions with a focus on older adults, who are also interested in academic publishing and research.

The Fellow will gain experience in writing, learn about manuscript preparation, peer review, manuscript editing, publishing ethics and standards, and journal production. They will be involved in journal business including handling article submissions and be supported to write and publish at least one editorial article and will participate in original research in editorial Processing.

The appointment will run concurrently with the Fellow's usual training programme, or period out of programme for research.
